USER ASSISTANCE AND TRAIL GUIDE
 GM&O RAILS-TO-TRAILS RECREATIONAL DISTRICT OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI

The Tanglefoot Trail is a rails-to-trails project which preserves the 44.53-mile abandoned railroad corridor and its right-of-way, now owned by the GM&O Rails-to-Trails Recreational District of North Mississippi. The rail-banked corridor is now a multi-purpose public recreational trail which could be reactivated, if needed, for future economic development.

Walkers, bikers, joggers and nature lovers can enjoy the trail which extends from New Albany to Houston. Visitors to the Tanglefoot Trail will experience history as they pass through fields, forests and meadows down the path established by the Chickasaw Native Americans who once populated the area. This trail was followed by famed explorer Meriwether Lewis and later became the route of the railroad built by Col. William C. Falkner, great-grandfather of Nobel Prize winning author William Faulkner. The trail is named after one of the engines, "Tanglefoot," which performed admirably as the railroad became active.

We welcome you to the Tanglefoot Trail. Please remember to use the trail safely as you experience the history of this area and enjoy the beautiful outdoors the Trail offers.
